Assessing patient preference for a 1-hour versus a 12-hour observation interval after endoscopy: a prospective multicenter cohort study. The aim of this study is to assess the satisfaction of patients with either 1 hour versus 12 hours of post-endoscopy observation versus discharge after colonoscopy and to identify factors associated with patients' preference for either a shorter or longer stay. Consecutive adult patients undergoing screening or diagnostic colonoscopy were included. Data were collected prospectively by filling in the survey during the discharge process: the inclusion rate was 72% (222/308). Patients indicated their satisfaction with 1 hour observation (40.7%) or 1 day post-endoscopy observation (34.4%). Patients undergoing colonoscopy for screening and elderly patients were more likely to prefer 1-hour observation. Overall, 57.2% of patients expressed no preference (152/270). Multivariate analysis identified 5 independent predictors for not declaring a preference for 1-hour or 12-hour post-endoscopy observation: age greater than 50 years (adjusted odds ratio [OR] = 2.63; 95% confidence interval [CI] = 1.09-6.32; P = 0.03), female gender (adjusted OR = 0.44; 95% CI = 0.18-1.07; P = 0.07), lower anxiety level prior to the procedure (adjusted OR = 0.25; 95% CI = 0.07-0.94; P = 0.04), lack of dissatisfaction with the endoscopy procedure (adjusted OR = 5.88; 95% CI = 1.85-18.8; P = 0.003), and waiting time outside of the examination room after the procedure (adjusted OR = 0
