Exploring the Organizer After you've located a photo you want to work on, double-click the image file to open it in your image-editing program. After the picture is open, you can move or copy it or use one of the many tools you can use to rename, resize, and edit. If you have a hard copy of the photo you want to work on, you can open it in the print dialog box (View → Print) or insert the photo into a word processing program and make all the edits you want. You can also use a photo-editing program to view and work on your images in the digital darkroom. (Using darkroom software is covered in Chapter 16.) If you're using a Mac, you can also use the built-in Organizer to organize images and find the images you want. Check out the "Organizing Photos on a Mac" section later in this chapter. If you need to resize a photo, you can use the Photo Size command. The easiest way to organize your images is to create a folder hierarchy. It doesn't matter where you put the photos. You can even toss your photos onto your hard drive and then put them in a folder and create a new folder. If you get tired of working on your photos, you can always reorganize the directory by simply changing the name of the folder. You can

BlackBerry (BB.O) will reduce its workforce and refocus its business, the company's chief executive John Chen told Reuters in an interview on Tuesday. "There is a lot of truth to the rumours out there. Our business strategy is working. We are making tremendous progress in the work we have going on, but we have to make some changes to our organization," Chen told Reuters, adding that the refocused company would have fewer than 5,000 employees. "We will right size the organization in the way that we think we can best serve our customers." Chen said the shift in strategy will allow the company to focus more on sales of hardware and software to corporations and other customers, and less on selling mobile phones to consumers. The shift will allow the company to focus on growth in smart devices as the next generation of mobile devices, Chen said. BlackBerry is seeking to turn around a business that has long been criticized for the poor quality of its once dominant smartphones. BlackBerry's smartphone operating system, formerly the market leader for business devices, was eclipsed by Apple Inc's (AAPL.O) iOS and Google Inc's (GOOGL.O) Android software platforms. The company has struggled to gain traction in the consumer market with its line of smartphones, and BlackBerry's stock price has fallen more than 50 percent over the past two years. BlackBerry shares rose 1 percent in New York on Tuesday afternoon. They were up 7.3 percent in Toronto at 3:45 p.m. ET. Chen said in July that the company, which has about 10,000 employees, is looking to cut up to 5,000 jobs or a third of the workforce over two years. Last month, Chen said BlackBerry had shifted its focus to corporate business customers, focusing on securing contracts, lowering prices and winning new business. BlackBerry said it had also invested $375 million in Indian software company TELUS Corp, which makes handset software for other companies, to help secure its place in the market. Q: Why are colours in the theme chosen? My question is partly about math and somewhat about PHP. It seems to me that PHP has two possible choices in theme selection. Math to choose the theme color. Math to choose the theme title font color. As far as I understand the domain of usefulness for PHP is purely PHP. As a result one of the choices seems less useful. So my question is: Why is it possible to choose a different color in the theme than the color of the theme's title? I think the answer has something to do with the Math to choose theme text colors. A: Firstly, this is a bit of a confusing point of terminology. Let me just start by defining my terms. The "theme color" refers to the color of any text in the theme that isn't a piece of markup such as a tag or other element. It could be a CSS background color, for instance, or any styles that apply to plain text, and everything that isn't a tag or some other markup. The "theme font color" refers to the color of the font used in any tags or other markup in the theme. It could be a CSS color applied to the element, for instance, or any styles that apply to tags, or other tags with styles applied to them. The 'color of the theme's title' refers to the color of the tag. It could be a CSS color applied to the element, for instance, or any styles that apply to tags. PHP is not part of the theme, so I'll define the 'theme color' as the color of anything in the theme, while I'll define the 'theme font color' as the color of the text in tags. Both of the examples that you have given, Math to choose the theme color and Math to choose the theme font color, are a valid choice, and I don't see a contradiction between them. In one, you are choosing the theme color, while in the other you are choosing the theme font color. In the former you are applying the theme color to anything that isn't markup, while in the latter you are applying the theme font color to anything that isn't a tag. If the theme uses a colour that isn't a valid colour in CSS, then it might be better to turn it into a transparent colour
